

Questions To Ask When Picking A Senior Care Community

The search for the right senior care community can be a challenge, so asking questions can help pair you or a loved one with the proper care. Many senior communities provide multiple levels of care that can allow for an independent lifestyle with the knowledge your needs will be met should they change. Learn more about the questions you should ask when picking a senior community:

Assisted Living - What is assisted living?

Assisted living is similar to independent living offering a maintenance free lifestyle and activities, but with the addition of dining services and personal care. You or a loved one will have access to assistance with daily activities that you may find difficult to perform on your own. Daily living assistance could include medication reminders, hygiene assistance, and more.

1. What is the cost of your assisted living?
2. What care services do you offer?
3. What types of transportation do you provide?
4. What happens when I need additional services?
5. What happens if there's a medical emergency?
6. What is the ratio of staff to residents during the day/night?
7. How does the facility communicate with families about a resident's well-being?
8. What apartment styles/options are available?
9. Amenities and activities?
10. What dining options are offered?

Rehab (Short Term Rehabilitation) - What is short term rehab care?

Rehabilitation helps an individual regain physical or mental abilities that have been impaired or lost due to illness or injury.

1. How does the facility communicate with families about a resident's well-being?
2. What is the ratio of staff to residents during the day/night?
3. What is the average length of stay?
4. How will progress be recorded and tracked?
5. Is there a continuum of care?
6. How many hours of therapy a day will there be?
7. Is the facility experienced in treating your loved one's condition?
8. What insurances are accepted?
